Costing Experience

Ryan is a Chartered Accountant, but with an IT angle. He loves diving into the details available within your systems to design and develop a costing solution delivering answers to the costing questions you have.

Some of the organisations he has worked with have attempted costing projects internally, only to be told “it can’t be done.” This is like a red rag to a bull for Ryan!

Examples of costing projects include:

- Costing engine for a large meat processing company. A feature of this project was deconstruction, with metrics including billions of dollars of costs and over two hundred million cost allocations and apportionments.
- Costing for a globally recognised bank in London. Driving organisational costs down to Tied Financial Advisors vs Independent Financial Advisors.
- Australian State Water – built costing model answering the question – how much does it cost to deliver water through our network to location XY for an industrial customer?
- Costing City Council Services – Iterative Activity Based Costing (ABC) model to drive all organisational costs (general ledger) through to end services delivered to the rate payers.
- Australian State Government Department – built model costing each of the legislated services delivered by the department. This project also answered the question – what additional funding can be requested to deliver new legislative requirements?
